A persuasive manager is empathetic, demonstrating genuine concern for their team's well-being and understanding their perspectives. Strategic communication involves tailoring your message to your audience. A persuasive manager considers their audience's needs, values, and motivations when communicating. They use clear, concise language, avoiding jargon and focusing on the benefits of their proposals. They also use various communication channels effectively, selecting the best method for the message and audience. This might involve one-on-one conversations, team meetings, emails, presentations, or even informal chats.

Overcoming Challenges: Resistance and Obstacles
